Charity providing sport for disabled will be Cllr Hayes's main cause

by Dick Townsend-Smith

THE new Mayor of the Royal Borough of Greenwich has given a special 10th anniversary present to a charity which provides sport for people with disabilities, by making them his charity for his year in office.

Cllr Mick Hayes was sworn in at a ceremony in the Painted Hall at the Old Royal Naval College, Greenwich, last Tuesday (June 17), replacing Cllr Angela Cornforth.

The charity he will support is the South London Special League, the borough-based charity started in 2004 by Sharon Brokenshire with her redundancy money, to give children and adults with disabilities and special needs the chance to play football. It has now developed to offer a variety of sporting activities.

Cllr Hayes, the Eltham West ward councillor, said: "The charity promotes well-being and a sense of achievement. "I visited the league the morning after Fusilier Lee Rigby died in Woolwich.

"There, I saw young people from all different backgrounds playing together, and it was such an antidote to the tense and shocked atmosphere everywhere else in the borough.

"It then struck me how much a role sport played in promoting unity, which is why I have made the league my Mayor's

Royal borough domestic abuse campaign is a welcome move

RE your front page article Red card for domestic violence (June 17) I am glad to see at long last something is to be done in respect of domestic violence. Sadly our son was killed in 2007, so it came too late to help him.

Mrs Venn, Shooters Hill

● A spokesperson for the council said: "Thank you for your letter. We are sorry to hear of the tragedy that affected your family. We would like to thank you for your bravery in coming forward to raise awareness of this subject and hope that you doing so will encourage others to come forward, as early as possible when domestic violence occurs. Domestic violence and abuse is the cause of the deaths of two people in the UK every week, which is just one statistic the royal borough's campaign hopes to combat. For further information about the royal borough's campaign please see our four-page supplement within this week's edition of GT."

'Cut tree that's caused structural damage'

AFTER reading the letter in Greenwich Time (June 10) about Mr Leung's tree being removed while he was away, I would like to ask Mr Leung was the said tree causing any structural damage that he could see and did he see a hazard to anyone?

My reason for asking this is to point out a few things.

I don't have a tree in my garden, but there is one just along the side of my back fence.

The tree has been a hazard and caused structural damage over the years, yet it is still there. It is unbelievable.

Workmen just keep tarmacing over the cracks in the pavement.

We had to replace the boards that run along the bottom of the fence because of this tree.

We have known of two people who have fallen over part of the pavement and this tree is still standing.

So why did they cut Mr Leung's tree down and leave others that need sorting out still standing?

We have to phone and ask nearly every year for this tree to be cut back.

Mrs J Longford, Woolwich

● A spokesperson for Greenwich Council said: "Thank you very much for your letter Mrs Longford. The council will cut down a tree only when it becomes a hazard, or when it has the potential to cause structural damage to nearby buildings. In cases such as yours, where roots have disturbed the paving, local repairs made using flexible tarmac are often an effective way of keeping the tree and ensuring that the pavement is safe and usable. We encourage anyone experiencing problems with trees growing close to roads or on pavements to call 020 8921 8900 or email contact-centre@royalgreenwich.gov.uk to report the problem."

charity for the year." Cllr Hayes was born in Stepney and had a variety of jobs, including as an insurance broker at Lloyds.

He spent 30 years with the Royal Mail, before taking early retirement having moved to the borough in 1974. His three children went to local schools.

He has been married for 42 years to Gillian, who becomes the Mayoress of Royal Greenwich. Cllr Hayes has been a borough councillor since 1994, including 11 years as chair of the scrutiny committee.

He added about his intentions for his year in office: "I see my role as mayor as helping to celebrate the achievements of all the clubs, organisations and individuals who help to promote the well-being of the borough."

"Visiting and meeting them helps acknowledge the efforts of so many people from all sorts of different backgrounds."

The choir from Ealldham Primary School, in Eltham, sang for guests at the mayor-making.

The new mayor paid tribute to outgoing one, Cllr Angela Cornforth, saying that she had carried out the role with a sense of duty and a sense of humour, tolerance and dignity.

"In short, you have been everything a mayor should be," he told her in his address.

Cllr Cornforth had been sworn in as Mayor just hours after Fusilier Rigby's murder last May.

She told guests on Tuesday: "It was a year in which I have seen both sides of human nature."

"I've witnessed the generosity of people who contributed to the two charities I chose to support during my year, Barnardo's and The Prince's Trust, and I am pleased to say that we have been able to support young adults to seek and gain employment, because having a job brings a purpose to a person's life."

"The untimely death of Fusilier Lee Rigby, who served his country, affected us all."

"I would like to thank everyone who has worked so hard to foster a more cohesive and tolerant society."

"I am proud that because of the vitality of our democratic process I can pass on my role to Mick Hayes. The council's motto is 'We Govern By Serving', and working together we face the future with strength and ambitious plans."

Cllr Norman Adams, who was first elected to the council in 1978, was announced as Deputy Mayor.

GLLaB to help residents as BT seeks to recruit 50 engineers

TELECOMS giant BT wants to recruit around 50 engineers from the Royal Borough of Greenwich and its neighbouring borough of Lewisham.

People interested in applying can get help from Greenwich Local Labour and Business, the royal borough's local employment initiative.

It is part of a BT recruitment campaign to fill 240 jobs in London.

The company is looking for people who, ideally, are computer literate and have previous experience of working in a customer-facing or service environment, outdoors if possible, and particularly in areas such as construction.

BT says relevant experience is not essential, as full training will be given.

What is more important, it says, is to be able to show evidence of team-working, good organisational and person-to-person skills, and the ability to work unsupervised.

GLLaB, based at the Old Library in Calderwood Street, Woolwich, is offering support to people who want to apply for a BT job.

It will help them with their online application forms and give advice on how to update and present their CVs.

To make an appointment with GLLaB, telephone 020 8921 2440.

Cllr Sizwe James, the council's cabinet member for business, employment and skills, said: "This is an excellent employment opportunity for local people, and I urge them to take advantage of the expertise available from GLLaB to help them with their applications."

BT says relevant qualifications are useful, but not essential.

But the company does need evidence that people are fit and able to take on sometimes physically-demanding work, are not colour blind and have a full manual driving licence with no more than six points, with an HGV licence being a bonus.

Any convictions should be disclosed at the outset as full checks will be made with any unspent convictions to be taken into account depending on their severity.

The company says it has a diverse workforce and it welcomes applications from women and members of ethnic minority groups.

Basic salaries range from £17,000 to £19,000, plus an additional allowance of £3,380 for inner London or £1,637 for outer London per year with a further performance related bonus worth up to 20 per cent of salary.

Other benefits include 22 days holiday, increasing to 28 days with length of service, a contributory pension scheme, free broadband plus BT Vision at reduced rates.

New recruits will undergo at least three weeks comprehensive initial training, followed by buddying on the job and then the opportunity for ongoing skills development.

All tools, clothing and a van will be provided.

New bag of tricks

Residents test pilot recycling scheme for flats

by Dick Townsend-Smith

HIGH rise tenants in Woolwich have got it in the bag.

That's the message about recycling. Flat-dwellers in Nightingale Heights are among the first to test out new blue reusable recycling bags.

It's part of a pilot scheme to encourage people who live in blocks of flats to recycle more.

The scheme comes amid National Recycling Week from June 16-20, when the council ran a number of activities to promote recycling generally.

Across the borough residents have been given reusable bags so that they can conveniently separate and store their recycling in their flat, ready to take down to the communal recycling bins outside.

If the scheme is judged a winner, flat-dwellers who share large communal recycling bins will be contacted and provided with the reusable bags.

Waste management experts say it is really important for residents using the large communal recycling containers to place only good recyclable material into these bins.

It is difficult for recycling crews to identify non recyclable material put in the recycling containers. This is only realised once the bin is being emptied into the vehicle – and sometimes, it can ruin the whole load. This means all the efforts of the residents who have done their bit for recycling will be wasted.

Residents in houses can put recyclable items – cans, cardboard, paper, plastic bottles, glass bottles and jars, as well as waxed beverage cartons, such as juice cartons, and paperback books – into their blue top bins.

The recycling crews collect this every week and take it to the materials recycling facility in Thamesmead, where it is sorted and sent on for processing.

Although rubbish chutes might be the most convenient way to get rid of rubbish, the royal borough is encouraging residents to sort out their recyclables, even if it is just newspapers or glass bottles, and take it to their recycling bin. They say 'every little helps'.

Cllr Jackie Smith, the royal borough's cabinet member for community safety and environment, said: "Early indications show that the reusable bags have been successful and helped boost the amount of recycling collected from the flats that took part.

"Residents have helped the council to recycle almost 39 per cent of household waste, but even this can be improved."

● If you do not have access to recycling facilities where you live or unsure of where they are located, or simply want some advice on what you can and cannot recycle, contact the council on 020 8921 4661 or email contact-centre@royalgreenwich.gov.uk

Clean sweep for World Cup victors

THE Cleansweep team from the Royal Borough of Greenwich won the Men's Health Week World Cup football competition for the third year running. It took place at Charlton Athletic's training ground in New Eltham, at the end of a week of activities to highlight men's health issues.

The winning team took part as Columbia and beat Argentina 2-0 in the final. A total of 15 teams took part, including from children's centres, the housing department and firms such as Sainsbury's. Fundraising on the night raised £330 for Prostate Cancer UK. Various groups put on activities during the week, including children's centres who run dads and kids groups and the healthy business network, which offers advice to companies on achieving the London Healthy Workplace Charter. Another was Men in Sheds which hopes to set up a new shed at the YMCA at Woolwich Dockyard. Contact AgeUK Greenwich and Bromley on 020 8294 3017 or email spaxman@ageukbandg.org.uk

Award for joined up care

GREENWICH's joined up system of health and social care has won a national award for innovation in social care.

Greenwich Coordinated Care received the top award at the MJ Achievement Awards 2014, hosted by the Municipal Journal last week.

The project is making services more responsive to residents while cutting hospital admissions and healthcare costs.

The scheme has been developed by the royal borough, NHS Greenwich CCG, Oxleas NHS Foundation Trust and the local voluntary sector.

It has already won praise from the care and health sectors, government ministers and healthcare experts.

Greenwich is one of 14 authorities declared by the government to be 'pioneers' in the development of integrated health and social care as it helps to share best practice nationally.

A key feature is allowing people to be cared for in the community rather than in hospital.

Integrated teams of nurses, social workers, occupational therapists and physiotherapists work together in responding to emergencies at care homes, accident and emergency and doctors' surgeries.

Together they handle cases that can be dealt with through treatment and care at home or through placement in a community-based intermediate care bed, giving people time and support to regain their independence wherever possible.

Cllr David Gardner, council cabinet member for health and social care, said: "In Greenwich we are committed to giving people more independence, and creating services tailored to their individual needs."

"This award is recognition for the excellent and innovative work that is being done by staff in the royal borough, the local NHS and voluntary organisations."

"It is helping to bring about a real difference to the lives of local people, while also starting to influence the practice of other authorities."

Jane Wells, director of adult community health services at Oxleas NHS Foundation Trust, said: "The Greenwich Pioneer Project is a shining example of joint working to provide better support at home and earlier treatment in the community."

"I am thrilled for everyone involved to have their hard work and achievements recognised and rewarded in this way."

Interview date: 11th July 2014

HITTING THE RIGHT NOTES: Ealdham School choir performed at last week's mayor-making ceremony at the Old Royal Naval College in Greenwich, when new Mayor, Cllr Mick Hayes, received his chain of office the National Gallery in London. We organise visits more locally, for example to the Cutty Sark and the National Maritime Museum in Greenwich, to help make the children proud of their local heritage.

"Our teachers also make sure they identify and narrow any gaps in individual child's learning."

At Hawksmoor in Thamesmead, headteacher Briony Brammer said: "We have an outstanding creative curriculum and a strong focus on developing work-related skills. We create our own micro-societies, where the children elect their own king and queen, and appoint tax collectors. They create a business plan, work out the raw materials they need, have talks from visiting experts like bankers, and hold 'Dragons Den' sessions. In Year 6, they have their own version of television's 'The Apprentice'. We explain why it's important for them to do well at school and go on to get decent exam grades later – and I can't wait for the first Hawksmoor pupil to get to Oxbridge."

She added: "We are also very good here at helping children with difficulties – we are committed to help every single child achieve their best. Our teachers are absolutely passionate about making the children do the best they can be, and any child who slips behind we make sure they catch up."

Cllr John Fahy, the borough's cabinet member for children's services, said: "We are extremely proud of the partnership between our pupils, staff and parents which helps our schools to achieve above average results across all aspects of the curriculum. These awards are recognition that their efforts can make a huge difference, particularly in areas considered to be disadvantaged."

Tall ships art & story competition

AN art and writing competition inspired by the Tall Ships was officially launched at the Tower of London last week.

Now royal borough children are invited to enter and win the chance to see their work displayed during the Falmouth to Royal Greenwich Tall Ships Regatta later this summer.

The Falmouth to Royal Greenwich Tall Ships Regatta, starts in Falmouth August 28-31 before racing to the Isle of Wight and arriving in Greenwich September 5-9. The Big Art & Storytelling Tall Ships Project has been created to be the artistic celebration of the event.

Regatta artist-in-residence, John Dyer, has unveiled his fireworks and fiesta painting "Tall Ships & Small Ships 2014," based on memories of the last Falmouth Tall Ships Festival in 2008.

The competition is challenging young people to be inspired and create their own picture story, poem, or scene from a play.

Local children and schools can submit their artwork online to enter.

An exhibition of the winning pieces along with work produced by local Greenwich children will be displayed in the Greenwich Heritage Centre during the Tall Ships event.

TOWER OF LONDON LAUNCH: Tall Ships & Small Ships Royal Greenwich by John Dyer, 33 x 40 inches acrylic,

The competition closes on August 1 with the 24 top prize winners, another 200 top art entries and a selection of the different types of writing going on display at the National Maritime Museum Cornwall and the Greenwich Heritage Centre during the Tall Ships Regatta.

The heritage centre is running a series of free drop-in painting workshops where children can enter their artwork and writing. Workshops are on Saturday July 26, 10am-noon and 2-4pm and on Saturday September 6, 10am-noon and 2-4pm.

John Dyer said: "You quite often hear of a work of art but not so often the other way around. I believe everybody is born highly creative and artistic – it's what helps us develop and learn – and it's a real privilege to be encouraging artistic talents, working with children across the country in this special and magical event."

'Make ours a double!'

Brewers win two awards and plants London's first hop farm in a century

MEANTIME Brewing have won two awards just a few days after planting London's first hop farm in a century on the peninsula.

The Greenwich firm were the toast of the town as they picked up best medium sized business and - even more prestigious - the overall business of the year title at the London Business Awards.

Chief executive Nick Miller told GT: "I'm absolutely thrilled and delighted to have won these awards."

"It really recognises the steps Meantime have taken to change how craft beer is viewed and produced."

"This really is a reflection of the whole of Meantime and the Meantime team. We've really grown since 2011 and things are really taking off."

"We celebrate all kinds of beer, we're responsible producers, and we are firmly rooted in Greenwich and the Meantime link. We're really proud of our Greenwich roots and to be representing the Greenwich community in this way. We produce a premium product and I'm proud to say we're leading the charge in modern craft beer."

The brewery demonstrated its desire to nurture its local roots recently by planting a hop farm directly on the Greenwich Meridian line.

Designed by landscape gardener Kate Lonergan and her team, the urban space features 48 hop plants in 12 hand-crafted wooden planters.

This has been done on a construction site with The O2 Arena as the farm's backdrop.

It means that by September, the brewers will be producing a tipple totally produced in Greenwich, rather than having to bring in hops from areas such as Kent.

Meantime was founded in 1999 and is now London's largest modern craft brewer. It is hoped that the plants will produce about 9lb of hop buds in their first year, enough to brew a 10 hectolitre batch, ready to drink in the autumn.

Rich Myers, Meantime's marketing director, said: "London is an exciting place to be a brewer right now. The variety of ingredients at our disposal is huge and it allows us to pack flavour into our beer."

"While brewing was an industry that declined to an almost terminal point in London during the 1990s, a new generation of modern craft businesses has got it back on its feet and there are some fantastic beers that are bold, full of flavour and character - just like the city itself."

"The beer we will create is about championing our capital's rich brewing heritage."

Cllr Sizwe James, cabinet member for business, employment and skills, said: "Congratulations to Meantime Brewing both on the awards and for showing innovation by planting the hop farm."

"They are a great example of a well-established, innovative company that has helped to put the royal borough on the map as a place to do business."

ABOUT 40 youngsters aged four to 16 have become regulars at a street hockey programme, sponsored by Charlton Triangle Homes.

The sessions are run on Tuesdays from 5-6.30pm by The Sports For Streets Initiative, a professional youth engagement organisation, which supplies professional coaches and all the kit, including full protective clothing, stick.

They take place in a ball court in Springfield Grove, opposite Charlton House.

One player, Amany Mohammed, aged 10, said: "I love it, it's great fun and really fun when you play a game. I always look forward to the next session."

Louise Mathieson, neighbourhood manager/community development for Charlton Triangle Homes, said: "Each week more children want to get involved and it's great to see the regular children help out alongside the coaches with the skating and game rules. The fun they have and the commitment they show is great to see."

Going into the summer holidays, the housing association have decided to run two sessions of street hockey each week with other activities including dance, cookery, arts and crafts, make up, Charlton Athletic FC coaching, table tennis and more.

This summer programme will be running over five weeks, starting on Monday July 28.

● For more information and to sign up visit the housing association's offices at 9-10 Cedar Court, Charlton.

Hundreds at home ownership show

MORE than 800 people visited Woolwich Town Hall to learn about buying a home through shared ownership and affordable rents and other rent options.

The Royal Greenwich & South East London New Home Show was organised by the council.

It was a chance for househunters to meet representatives from housing associations which are running shared ownership schemes in the borough and south east, and to get financial and legal advice on the process.

Housing associations promoting new and future low cost homes available at the event included Moat, Peabody, L&Q and Hyde, Notting Hill and Viridian as well as the royal borough's housing company Meridian Home Start.

Attendees received advice and information on shared ownership and other types of intermediate housing from experts from Homematch which provided hourly presentations.

A hundred and seventy five people signed up to a new, centralised list of Greenwich residents interested in shared

GOOD SHOW: visitors learn about shared ownership schemes

Greenwich resident Helen Quang attended on behalf of her daughter who is looking to purchase her first home in the area through shared ownership.

She said: "The event was very informative and helpful, and I now understand the difference between getting a mortgage on an open market property and a shared ownership arrangement. I'm now definitely more confident about going back to my daughter and telling her that shared ownership is a good plan".

Cllr Chris Kirby, the council's cabinet member for housing and HR, said: "Events like this are vital in helping local people get information and support on the alternatives to social housing and the council works in partnership with a range of housing providers to ensure local people can get access to the range of home ownership opportunities available. It's part of the council's on-going commitment to supporting residents who want to access home ownership but are being priced out of doing so."

Film writer's debut

LIFE UNRAVELLING:
Keeping Rosy, starring Maxine Peakes, is the debut film for writer Mike Oughton, from Greenwich

THE FIRST film written by Royal Hill resident Mike Oughton, and shot locally, will be released at the Greenwich Picturehouse on Friday (June 27).

Mike has collaborated on Keeping Rosy with writer/director Steve Reeves.

He said: "It's my first film. As you can imagine, I am rather excited about it and I would like as many people as possible to see it. The film was shot almost entirely on the Isle of Dogs, so I got to walk to the set every day under the Greenwich foot tunnel.

"One scene was even filmed on the river bank opposite the Cutty Sark by the rowing club, at low tide at 4am, so it really is a film that will interest Greenwich people."

The film stars Maxine Peake and Blake Harrison - Neil from The Inbetweeners. It follows what happens when Charlotte (Peake: The Moors Murders, Little Dorrit and Shameless) - who is career-driven but betrayed in the boardroom of the media agency she has devoted herself to building. Her life disintegrates as she returns home and takes her anger out on her cleaner. The story follows her heart-wrenching journey as she goes on a journey of self-discovery, atonement and danger and she strives for a future that is rosy.

The Greenwich Picturehouse review says: "Recalling the dark wit and tension of Hitchcock, and powered by a central performance of real spirit and pathos from Peake, Keeping Rosy is as humane and heartfelt as it is stylish and unpredictable. A truly engrossing British thriller."

The 90-minute film runs from 6pm. For more information about the film visit www.keepingrosy.com/ and to book tickets visit www.picturehouses.co.uk/ or telephone the box office on 0871 902 5732.

IF you get fed up of the football World Cup, there's a celebration of world music hosted by Global Fusion Music and Arts on Thursday evening (June 26).

The feast of music and culture features artists from China, Africa and India keeping with the global theme.

Internationally renowned Chinese Pipaplayer, Cheng Yu, makes a welcome return to Charlton House after her stunning performance at the GFMA International Women's Day event in March. She wowed the 150-strong audience with her virtuoso playing of her three stringed instrument the Pipa.

"I don't know how she manages to achieve the speed of playing, range and quality of sounds she gets from her beautiful instrument, it's so melodic, yet so technical," said project manager Louisa Le Marchand. "We were putting the programme together and everyone was so excited that Cheng Yu would be returning and performing a longer set," Louisa added.

Joining the exciting line-up for the evening will be GFMA favourite Mosi Conde, Kora player from Guinea who is currently recording his album at the GFMA studios in Charlton.

"Mosi a very established Kora player and is one of the top Kora players currently residing in the UK. His soulful voice and skilful playing soothe even the most troubled soul. Our cat will not make an appearance if anyone is recording in the studio, but every time Mosi plays the Kora, she sits and listens as if in rapture!" Louisa told GT.

To give a taste of India GFMA have invited Unnati Dasgupta with her beautiful voice and Indian harmonium. Unnati will be performing songs from her latest album 'Indigo Soul' accompanied by guitar and tabla.

ROYAL BOROUGH OF GREENWICH ROAD TRAFFIC REGULATION ACT 1984 - SECTION 14 (1) VARIOUS ROADS - TEMPORARY PROHIBITIONS AND RESTRICTIONS OF TRAFFIC

1. NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the Council of the Royal Borough of Greenwich intends to make an Order to accommodate essential works to roofing, cladding measures in Berry Hill, Dumbreck Road, Dunvegan Road, Earlsfield Road, Hildesley Road, Ellbank Road, Ebban Park Gardens, Glenesk Road, Glenies Road, Glenlyn Road, Glenhill Road, Glenure Road, Grangehill Road, Greenholm Road, Greenside Road and Well Hall Parade. The effect of the Order would be to temporarily implement various traffic management measures, dependent on site conditions, which would include waiting restrictions and road closures within 20 metres of junctions with certain adjacent roads and prohibited turns at adjacent roads, as and when required in the roads listed above.

NOTE: The works in the above roads would not be conducted concurrently. The road closures would only be applied, wherever possible, in the immediate vicinity of the works. Vehicular access to properties affected by these works would be maintained wherever possible subject to the extent and operations of the works.

Vehicular access to properties affected by these works would be maintained wherever possible subject to the extent and operations of the works.

3. Whilst the restrictions specified in paragraph 1 are in operation the alternative route for traffic would be via local roads as appropriate and vehicles should follow local discretionary signing.

4. The Order would come into force on 1st July 2014 and would continue in force for up to 18 months, or until the works have been completed, whichever is the sooner. However, it is expected that the works would take approximately two months to complete.

THE CHOIR MASTERS: pupils from 19 borough schools took part in the event

Strong voices of youth

CHILDREN and young people sang their hearts out at a singing spectacular on June 12 and 13. There were two nights of music featuring popular and classic numbers at Blackheath Halls. They included performances by primary and secondary school choirs. More than 600 children took part. As well as individual school items there were several impressive renditions with all the choirs singing together. The event was organised by Greenwich Music Hub, which runs music tuition across the borough.

The schools involved included: Plumcroft, Mulgrave, Invicta, Greenacres, Woolwich Poly, Eltham Hill, Bannockburn, Halstow, Plumstead Manor, Brooklands, Eltham C of E, Deansfield, Gordon, Sherington, South Rise, Meridian and Discovery. They received an enthusiastic and whole hearted responses from the audience which included representatives from the Arts Council and councillors Allan McCarthy, John Fahy and Angela Cornforth. Cllr Fahy, the borough's cabinet member for children's services, said: "Congratulations to all those who were involved in the planning and delivery of the Singing Spectacular. Both evenings were a resounding success and indicated the range of talent and musicality in our schools."

Tennis club all lit up for a bright future

SHOOTERS Hill Lawn Tennis Club will be hosting an open day this Sunday (June 29), where it will be able to show off two more floodlit courts as it encourages people to play tennis all year round.

The club, on Eaglesfield Road, now has six all-weather macadam surface courts, all floodlit.

The latest two are now in operation thanks to a £53,000 grant from Sport England and a £39,000 loan from the Lawn Tennis Association (LTA).

They will enable them to expand their 360-strong membership - 250 of them children aged from under five upwards who are coached in various weekly sessions, running throughout the year.

On the middle Sunday of Wimbledon, where no play is scheduled, the club will be demonstrating what they have to offer.

It is part of the Great Britain Tennis Weekends (GBTW), a new national initiative by the LTA set up to encourage more people to take up a game which, on a global basis, has tournaments nearly every week of the year on hard courts and clay, not just the grass as at Wimbledon.

Shooters Hill has a busy coaching programme, led by Phil Layfield, the Kent coach of the year in 2009 who has recently been awarded AEGON coach of the month by the LTA.

He is qualified sports teacher who has been in to several schools to promote the game and take coaching sessions.

SMASH HIT: Tennis is as popular as ever at Shooters Hill LTC, under Phil Layfield, (below) who received an LTA award from Simon Jones

Club secretary Caroline Ratcliffe said:

"It's wonderful to have them because it means we can play all year round in the evening. We have achieved club mark with the LTA and done a lot of work for small children and adults and always welcome new members."

The club provides internal competitions, teams for leagues or just a club for members to enjoy social matches, for under fives upwards.

Phil's assistant coach, Luke House, 25, started young at the club (aged six), as did Caroline's son Robert, 22, now running his own coaching programme in Leeds.

As well as Sunday's open day, which runs from 10am to 3pm starting with under fives, there will be another as part of the GBTW scheme, on July 20, from 4-7pm. This will follow the community fete for Eaglesfield Park Neighbourhood Watch Scheme.

Starting Blocks trio head to Games as another sets record

A THIRD athlete backed by Greenwich Starting Blocks has been picked for the Commonwealth Games, in the week when a younger athlete marked herself out as a star of the future.

Hammer thrower Shaunagh Brown, 24, was named in the England team for July's Games in Glasgow, following the selections in recent weeks of London Olympians Zoe Smith (weightlifting) and Gemma Gibbons (judo).

Meanwhile, Sabrina Sinha, who has only just turned 15, stormed to victory in the Kent Schools Athletics Championships U17 1,500 metres. She beat girls a year older and also smashed the event record.

Despite being one of the youngest in her age-group, she not only won but lowered the championships record by nearly 10 seconds, running 4mins 22.34 seconds. Her time puts her second in the UK rankings for the event this year and 18th in the nation's all-time records.

Sabrina, who trains with Cambridge Harriers at Sutcliffe Park, won the race by nearly 100m and will now compete for Kent schools in the English Schools Championships in Birmingham on July 11 and 12.

Starting Blocks is a charity that was set up to support promising athletes in the royal borough.

Eltham bowl over rivals

OVERALL WINNERS: Eltham CoE Primary School in action in the final and celebrating after their victory against Wyborne

by Ian Lamont

ELTHAM Church of England Primary School will represent the royal borough in the Kent Schools Kwik Cricket finals after winning the Greenwich competition.

They came out on top after 32 teams had taken to the fields at Eltham Park, in eight groups of four.

Each school had three group matches in the morning, after which they were divided into further groups in the afternoon, resulting in a total of eight trophies being up for grabs at the end of the day's play.

The winners of the top tier competition were the plum-and-yellow clad youngsters from Eltham, who will now go to the Kent competition in early July.

TROPHY TRIUMPH: James Wolfe (front) hold their trophy having beaten runners-up Christ Church in their section of the competition

They beat Wyborne, from New Eltham, in the final, with the scores 223 to 205.

The competition has been running for many years, with entries restricted to the first 32 schools to apply and the teams needing to contain at least two girls.

Organiser Gordon Stead, of Charlton School, said: "Cricket is big in the borough, where there is a good tradition of it.

"We're at the point now that people are asking if they can bring two or three sides, but we rely heavily on volunteers.

"We run it in conjunction with cricket clubs who provide people to do the umpiring and scoring."

The competition already runs from 10am until 3.30pm. Among the other trophy winners in the knock-out stages were James Wolfe School, Greenwich, who beat Christ Church 242 to 207.

Deputy leader of the royal borough, Cllr John Fahy, cabinet member for children's services, said: "Cricket is an excellent sport for building skills individually and as a team. It brings together people from many different backgrounds to enjoy their sport and also to keep fit.

"Congratulations to all the teams who took part and in particular champions Eltham Primary School. We wish them the best of luck as they represent the royal borough in the Kent competition."

A special 4-page feature on the Royal Borough's campaign against domestic violence

The ugly side of the beautiful game

HARD-HITTING posters which raise awareness of domestic violence have scored with the victims.

The football-themed posters have been put up in community centres, libraries, schools, children's centres, and on buses and train stations.

The striking images are designed to warn perpetrators that the law – and the vast majority of the public – will not tolerate them.

It's all part of an intensive campaign to tackle a growing problem in the royal borough. The council is investing £675,000 over two years to support the victims and encourage perpetrators to get help.

Some of the money is funding a Domestic Violence Intervention Team (DVIT) a specialist four-person police team at Plumstead Police Station.

Another £250,000 of funding has been invested by the local NHS Clinical Commissioning Group, to fund new initiatives to help reduce domestic violence. These include a helpline now available five days a week between 9.30am-4.30pm.

Council action was agreed after growing concern about the large number of families affected and children involved in child protection plans because of domestic violence.

Another key plank of the campaign is to urge people not to turn a 'blind eye'. The message is that domestic violence is not to be tolerated, and people should report it, whether they are neighbours, family members, friends, workmates or just passers-by.

Other parts of the council's domestic violence campaign will be used to:

- Provide victim support through voluntary sector organisations at Plumstead Police Station

- Change attitudes towards domestic violence through education programmes including the development of domestic violence 'tool kits' for use with under 12s to help shape children's attitudes and identify and support children from families experiencing domestic violence.

- Change the behaviour of domestic violence perpetrators through a new programme commissioned from a voluntary organisation.

- A programme to work with other people at -risk of becoming victims.

- Specialist training at Queen Elizabeth Hospital, Woolwich, to help staff deal with domestic violence cases, including sharing information and improving information logging.

Cllr Jackie Smith, the cabinet member for community safety who was formerly cabinet member for children and young people, said: "The vast majority of men and women are not violent, whether football is involved or not.

"But we know this type of abuse is happening out there. You can sense it almost daily, just by seeing and hearing the way some men and women talk to each other in our town centres.

"From my previous council work, I know full well the impact that domestic violence has on families and on children in particular.

"We need get the message across that people should not just turn a blind eye and ignore it. They should report what they see or hear, either direct to the police or to the Greenwich Domestic Violence and Abuse Service on 020 8317 8273."

ROYAL GREENWICH AGAINST DOMESTIC VIOLENCE AND ABUSE

Survivors unit

THE council's high-profile campaign to tackle domestic violence in the borough stepped up a gear this week with a renewed focus on showing victims where to go for help – and reinforcing the message that abusers will not get away with it. It comes on the back of research which says major sporting events can often provoke an increase in violence in the home.

SAFE SPACE: acting Det Ins Scott Walker at work in the domestic violence suite at Plumstead police station

A team in a league of its own

THE council-funded Domestic Violence Intervention Team (DVIT) based at Plumstead Police Station, provides an emergency response as well as follow-up support if charges are pressed. They direct victims to other organisations that can help them, and will also point those who commit violence to where they can get help, if they decide they want to change their ways. Since its launch DVIT has targeted 158 perpetrators, conducted 1,026 home welfare visits and obtained 41 restraining orders through the courts. Since June last year the DVIT has brought about an 83 per cent reduction in repeat victimisation of the top 11 high-risk domestic violence victims and an 80 per cent reduction of re-offending by the top 15 most prolific perpetrators. The council has commissioned an organisation called the Domestic Violence Intervention Programme (DVIP) to run behavioural change programmes for men who carry out domestic violence, but who want, or can be motivated, to change. It went live in April last year and will continue to run as more men are referred. Acting Det Insp Scott Walker, who leads the DVIT team, said: "My colleagues have been specially trained to step in when domestic abuse is taking place, and make a positive difference. This is true particularly where the abuse is ongoing.

"We build up a good working relationship with the victims, giving them greater confidence when their abusers go before a court, and also when they decide to make the life-changing decision to escape from an abusive relationship. Already, we have seen a fall in the number of repeat offences."

The team's work will be shown later this month in a BBC Crimewatch documentary on domestic violence. Baljit Ubhey the chief crown prosecutor for the crown prosecution service supports research that large sporting events often cause a spike in domestic violence and explained that the service has specialist domestic violence prosecutors and a dedicated domestic violence unit. She said: "Domestic violence is a key priority for CPS London and I want to urge all victims of this under-reported crime to come forward with the confidence that we are committed to bring perpetrators to justice."

When bad sports become violent

THE Her Centre provides all round support for victims of domestic abuse through its Domestic Violence Advocacy Service.

It includes emotional and practical support and advice on issues with housing, the legal system and benefits. It also runs counselling sessions and a weekly drop in. Her Centre director Stacy Smith said: "Major sporting events, while not the cause, can be triggers for domestic abuse, as can any event that leads to increased drinking. Her Centre is aware that major sporting events can be a time of increased abuse, and we offer support to anyone who is experiencing domestic violence through safety planning, legal and practical support and counselling. We work with women, as it is mainly women who are abused but will advise and assist men to access support too. There are also agencies in Greenwich who work with people who are abusive but want to stop." Thirty-eight-year-old Claire Platt is now training to be a counsellor and runs a support course after got from the Her Centre. She said: "I met my partner through a friend and he seemed very charming. Things went well for a couple of months into my pregnancy and then he showed signs of being violent. The first time was when he came home after a match and had been on a drink binge and I later found cocaine and crack. Whenever there was a match that's when the violence started because of substance misuse. Another time he smashed up some glass doors when he was charged on drink and my neighbour had to call the police." She added: "He was off the drink and drugs for nine months and was having regular therapy but when I fell pregnant he started again. I didn't want Claire got a 12-month non molestation order against her partner and was in counselling for 18 months. She now volunteers for the national domestic violence helpline and runs courses for families affected by domestic abuse for the Her Centre. "I was terrified when I had to go to court, he was there and I walked in shaking and looking at the floor. I don't know how I put up with being bullied and picked on but I was in a ridiculous place myself." And her message for others: "I tell other women they are stronger than they think and to open up and talk to people. They shouldn't be ashamed, it's not their fault and that life can be so much better. All my fortune has come out of my misfortune." ● Call the Her Centre on 020 3260 7772.

The away supporters

SUPPORT for the campaign to tackle domestic violence has come from two Kidbrooke mothers who have experienced it at first hand. They set up an award-winning support group called F.A.C.E. to help vulnerable women move on, and make a fresh start. Faye Garwood and Cassie Taylor provide emotional and practical support, plus advice from visiting experts to support local women who feel isolated, vulnerable and alone. More than three-quarters of their members have experienced domestic violence. Cassie said: "Domestic violence does go up with things like major football tournaments, because for some reason, idiots think it's a licence to drink more, then they come home and it all starts off. "What's different now is there is a lot more support,

FACE OF SUPPORT: Faye Garwood and Cassie Taylor launched their own support group with campaigns like this one. People shouldn't just turn a blind eye to it. When I was young I experienced it in a flat in Charlton. People above and below me could hear what was going on but nobody ever asked me if I was OK. If you know it is going on you should tell people what you heard, provide a listening ear for them, and help them take action. If they aren't comfortable about going to the police, they can contact the Her Centre, or us. "We meet from 10am to 12.30pm every Friday at Middle Park Community Centre. We are also working with Greenwich Community College with younger girls aged from 16 to show them that domestic abuse is not normal, so that hopefully the next generation won't stand for it."

Help is just a phone call away

CALLS to a domestic abuse helpline have risen since extra funding which means it can open for longer hours. Advisers on the Greenwich Domestic Violence and Abuse Advice Line can take calls for five days a week between 9.30am-4.30pm instead of just three days. The advice line handled 692 calls from December 2012-June 2013 and the number went up to 959 from December 2013 to this month. The line is run by Housing for Women, a charitable housing association which provides domestic violence abuse services for the royal borough working in partnership with local police and the council.

Chief executive Jakki Moxham said: "These services are so important - finding a place of safety can often mean the difference between life and death. Any woman living in fear must be given the opportunity to rebuild her life in a safe and secure environment. Working in close partnership with the police and council, means we can assess women's needs at a central point and refer them to the service that best matches their needs whether this is a refuge space or support in their homes." A 31-year-old mum-of-four who endured eight years of abuse from her husband eventually sought help from Housing for Women with the help of her father. She said: "My dad was given the helpline by one of his friends and initially phoned the referral line as he wanted to support me once he saw what my husband was like. He'd been hiding things and dad didn't realise what had been going on. I went to my dad as I was really tired and scared and getting really depressed because my husband was constantly criticising me. I felt really alone and it was really affecting me mentally, physically and emotionally. I couldn't take anymore.

Housing for Women were always there for me - they encouraged me to take as much help as I could get. I was advised on safety planning, financial advice, course, benefits, housing and moving forward with my life. Be strong, especially if you have children. If you think of your children and keep them safe, then that will give you the strength to stand up."
